True Stories of Women Who Have Won Out in Business

The business world is calling more women every day. The stories of many who have entered it and with their hands and brains and their only weapons have fought their way to success read like fiction.

Miss Edith Moriarty, who has worked her way to prominence in the newspaper sphere, has obtained the stories of many of these successful women and has prepared a series of articles about them.

We are glad to announce that we have obtained this series, entitled "True Stories of Successful Women," for our readers.

These stories deal with actual names and facts only.

They will appeal to all women and girls growing into womanhood who hope to make a name for themselves in business.

They will be interesting to the men readers too, because they will show how the "weaker sex" is progressing in what has heretofore been man's realm. You will want to read every one of these stories. Watch for the first one.

PLAN TO BUILD
HOTEL ON NORTH
MAIN CONSIDERED

Old Arlington Hotel Will Be Suggested to Special Committee of Chamber of Commerce as Site.

If the special committee of the Chamber of Commerce appointed to promote the building of another hotel in Memphis recommends the site at the southwest corner of Main street and Union avenue, on which the old Arlington hotel now stands, a number of business men and capitalists who are interested in property in that section are prepared to organize a company to erect a modern 300-room hotel on that site.

Tentative plans have been drawn for a hotel to cover not only the site of the Arlington hotel, but to take in three 25-foot lots adjoining on the south. Main street and the property to be built facing on Front street, which would give a site approximately 150 by 300 feet.

Several years ago a tentative agreement was made by which the two brothers, owners of the Arlington, were to put the ground they owned into a proposed hotel company, taking payment for the site in stock in the company, but the war caused abandonment of the plan.

Now that the municipal auditorium and market buildings are assured, the proposed hotel is again being considered. There will be a preliminary address on behalf of the Memphis lodge by Sadie Duke and response by Dr. J. J. Hoover, of Bolivar, Tenn., at 8 a. m. McClellan will preside over the meeting. The invocation will be pronounced by Rev. R. B. Roberts. Mayor Frank Monteverde has been asked to deliver the address of welcome and J. H. McClellan the response to the address of welcome.

WOMEN GATHER FOR REGISTRATION TO VOTE

In 1848, at Seneca Falls, N. Y., a band of women invited ridicule of the world by demanding that women be granted equal suffrage with men. That was the first woman's rights convention held anywhere, although Mary Woolstonecraft made the first appeal for women's rights in her "Vindication of the Rights of Women," in 1792.

From 1848 to 1919 is a far cry, yet the movement those women at Seneca Falls started, under the leadership of Elizabeth Cady Stanton, in this year coming into full realization in America. Today women in Memphis are celebrating their political freedom by registering at the booths with the men for their votes in the municipal election in November and for the presidential election in 1920.

Memphis women, in a business-like fashion, are going quietly to the various registration booths. They are not leaving the booths without registering for the cause of men, as some anti-suffragists have predicted, they would do.

It is only within the last 50 years that women have secured property and educational rights. Now Memphis women have equal political rights, at least in city and national elections. It is noteworthy that one of the greatest steps ever taken in this or any other country for women's rights was taken in Memphis in 1911 when the Southern Conference on Women and Child Labor formed its permanent organization in this city, its purpose being to secure uniform legislation on hours and conditions of labor for women and children.

It started the ball rolling toward better industrial conditions for women in the South, and its full importance has been realized during the past three years when women have assumed ever increasing responsibilities in the business world.

At noon Monday the registrars at the various wards reported that the registration of women was going slowly, but that all who registered did so with enthusiasm and in a manner which showed that they were well aware of the importance attached to the privilege of which they were allowed to make use for the first time.

It is probable that the full reports for the women's registration for Monday will be much smaller than was first expected. This, however, is certainly not due alone to indifference to the privilege, but to the fact that there are no many absent from the city at present. While many of the suffrage leaders had hoped to see Monday the record-breaking day for the registration, at the same time they hardly expected that it would be possible, for in addition to the fact that it is vacation time for so very many

TURKS SLAUGHTER GRECIAN PEASANTS

SALONIKI, Aug. 11.—An unknown number of Greek peasants were reported killed by Turkish gendarmes and bandits who surrounded the village of Thantou, according to Athens news agency dispatches. The Greeks were said to have refused to surrender and to have disarmed a Turkish detachment that entered the village. When reinforcements arrived the Turks fired on the Greeks.

Another Greek village, Kermeni, surrounded by a similar Turkish force, was saved from being more acutely distressed by the intervention of a French detachment.

The dispatches reported the situation in Thrace to be becoming more acute, although the Turkish government recently announced the removal of Vice-Prefect Tzavetis. It was said Tzavetis was still in office and that persecution of Christians was continuing.

NEGRO GOES OUT THROUGH BOTTOM

Going literally out the bottom of the "big yellow" police patrol car from the central office Sunday night as it sped along Second street between Madison and Court avenues around 30 miles an hour, Robert Jackson, negro, accused of the murder of his wife, Ellen Jackson, escaped from the police. To get away the negro had to pull the floor of the motor van. The negro, like a ferret, squeezed through the aperture he had made in the floor of the motor car, and, warning his way through the mechanism of the running gear, dropped to freedom even though the rear step of the car bumped his head like a triphammer.

Jackson shot his wife July 7 and fled. He was located in Birmingham, Ala., and the slain woman's brother put up $500 to defray the expenses of bringing the alleged murderer back. Warnout from the trip, Detective Dixon, who went after the negro, arrived at the Grand Central station shortly after 9 o'clock Sunday night and called for a police car. Policemen Fitzhugh and Norman, new men of the patrol car squad, answered.

When Jackson was placed in the little closed car, Dixon said Monday, he advised against taking the handcuffs off the negro, but the wagon men said he would be safe.

The negro had been in jail in Birmingham for several days and had been relieved of knife, keys and all such pocket tools. As the little wagon whizzed along along Second street, opposite Court square, Norman and Fitzhugh, seated in front, were nearly hit from their seats by the shock of a heavy bump. Just then a man on the sidewalk cried out:

"Hey, there, cops! You're run over a negro!"

By the time the police car could be stopped the negro was racing away in the darkness, going east on Court avenue.
